Climate Change Policy in the European Union

Confronting the Dilemmas of Mitigation and Adaptation?

The European Union (EU) has emerged as a leading governing body in the international struggle to govern climate change. The transformation that has occurred in its policies and institutions has profoundly affected climate change politics at the international level and within its 27 Member States. But how has this been achieved when the EU comprises so many levels of governance, when political leadership in Europe is so dispersed and the policy choices are especially difficult? Drawing on a variety of detailed case studies spanning the interlinked challenges of mitigation and adaptation, this volume offers an unrivalled account of how different actors wrestled with the complex governance dilemmas associated with climate policy making.

From the Foreword by Professor Lord Anthony Giddens:

'Surveying the role of the European Union in relation to climate change policy is no easy task ... How successful or otherwise the EU might be in this endeavour has a resonance across the world. This book provides an invaluable resource for anyone seeking to assess the possibilities and the pitfalls.'

Advance praise:

'... will be of great interest not only to those interested in the future of the climate regime but also to those concerned with the future of the European Union ...'

Professor Oran R. Young, Bren School of Environmental Science and Management, University of California, Santa Barbara

'... a must read for students and practitioners wishing to understand EU climate policy.'

Professor Miranda Schreurs, Director, Environmental Policy Research Centre, Freie Universitat Berlin

'... timely and thought-provoking ...'

Helen Wallace FBA, Centennial Professor, European Institute, London School of Economics and Political Science
