The scholarship holder is informed:

- that the scholarship follows the regulations laid down by the University Vice-Chancellor (PE 2013/356).
- that the scholarship is intended for the holder's own education/professional development and does not constitute remuneration for work or other services that have been carried out or will be carried out on behalf of the University.
- that the scholarship does not give any entitlement to sickness benefit, parental allowance, holiday pay or pension.
- that the host faculty/department and the scholarship holder shall draw up in writing an individual study plan.
- about funding, the length of stay, social conditions, and in addition there should be a continual review of the scholarship holder's development.
- about the insurance covering the scholarship holder and the need to check his/her own insurance needs.
- that the scholarship holder is to be treated equally to students/researchers in the same situation but with different sources of funding.
- that the scholarship holder is to be ensured of and to contribute to a good working environment.
- of the risk of possible retrospective taxation in Sweden in cases where the scholarships are administered/paid out by LU and the scholarship holder gains employment at LU in close connection to the end of the scholarship period.
- that the scholarship holder may be taxed in his/her home country; the scholarship holder should investigate this before starting the period of the scholarship.
